

Ten Commandments

a plastic dish pan with about 2 inches of shredded paper (to be snakes as in the lying suggestions)

4 blocks of wood about 2 inches high labeled with the first four commandments--how we relate to God.

One piece of wood about six inches square labeled with the fifth commandment.

Thread spools for everyone.

Five sticks about six inches long labeled with the last five commandments.

At first, everyone can get lost in the snake pit. “Help me, help me”
Next we build a platform that rests on the four commandments about God.
As our spools climb onto the platform, we protect ourselves by making a fence with the last five commandments so no one can fall off into the snake pit. BUT, if we break one of the commandments, especially one about God, the whole platform tips us back into the snake pit. God does not punish us for breaking a commandment. The commandments exist to make us safe from the snake pit.
